The Future of Influencers

Over the last five years, influencer marketing has grown into a multibillion-dollar industry, with brands large and small coming to view the practice as a less-than-fisted way to hawk their products. In the early days, brands that sent an influencer free products or offered to pay them a small commission in exchange for their consideration would often receive a shoutout or casual promotion. But as more and more companies came to see the practice as an invaluable marketing tool, the power balance flipped, and influencers began to command significantly higher fees for each post, mention, or product placement.

When I grow up I want to be:

A YouTuber

A Gamer

An Influencer

An e-sports player/coach

It's more than a fridge, it's the Family Hub

Make your kitchen the center of your home. With Family Hub, you can shop for food, organize your family's schedules, entertain, and even see who's at the door—all right from your fridge.*
